

the 1990s, the number of people in the world who are under 15 years of age is expected to increase from 1.1 billion to 1.5 billion (United Nations 1998).

There are a number of reasons why the number of children in the world is increasing. One of the main reasons is that the number of children who are surviving to the age of 5 has increased significantly in the past few decades. This is due to a number of factors, including improved medical care, better nutrition, and a decrease in the number of children who are dying from preventable diseases.

Another reason why the number of children in the world is increasing is that the number of children who are being born is increasing. This is due to a number of factors, including a decrease in the number of children who are being aborted, and an increase in the number of children who are being born to women who are younger than in the past.

There are a number of challenges that are associated with the increasing number of children in the world. One of the main challenges is that there are not enough resources to provide for all of the children. This is particularly true in developing countries, where there is a high level of poverty and a high level of unemployment.

Another challenge is that there are not enough schools to educate all of the children. This is particularly true in rural areas, where there are few schools and the quality of education is often poor. This can lead to a cycle of poverty, as children who are not educated are more likely to be poor when they grow up.

There are a number of ways that we can address these challenges. One way is to improve the quality of education. This can be done by providing more teachers, better training for teachers, and better facilities for schools. Another way is to provide more resources to children who are in need. This can be done through a number of programs, including food banks, clothing banks, and job training programs.

It is important that we take action to address these challenges. If we do not, the number of children in the world who are living in poverty and who are not being educated will continue to increase. This will have a negative impact on the world in the future.

There are a number of organizations that are working to address these challenges. One of the most well-known is UNICEF. UNICEF is a United Nations agency that is dedicated to the well-being of children. It provides a number of services, including education, health care, and nutrition.

Another organization that is working to address these challenges is the World Bank. The World Bank is an international financial institution that provides loans and technical assistance to developing countries. It has a number of programs that are specifically designed to help children, including the World Bank's Education for All program.

There are a number of other organizations that are also working to address these challenges. These include the Red Cross, the Red Crescent, and a number of non-governmental organizations. All of these organizations are working to make a difference in the lives of children around the world.

It is important that we all work together to address these challenges. If we do, we can make a difference in the lives of children around the world. We can ensure that every child has the opportunity to be educated and to live a better life.

There are a number of things that we can do to help children. We can donate to organizations that are working to help children. We can volunteer our time to help children. We can also simply be kind to children. All of these things can make a difference in the lives of children.

Let us all work together to make a difference in the lives of children around the world. Let us ensure that every child has the opportunity to be educated and to live a better life. Let us ensure that the future is bright for all children.
